Editorials

A Southern newspaper does a great service

A Montgomery newspaperman, Grover C. Hall Jr., editor of the Montgomery Alabama Advertiser, has done and is doing a great service to the South in his pinpointing of the fact of racial conditions in other sections of our nation.

Mr. Hall is a stickler for facts about segregation throughout the nation, and like most Southern editors, deprecates Northern newspaper treatment of the race problems as if it were something existing only in the South.

Through his editorial columns he has created widespread interest in several Northern communities.

Remembering race riots in Chicago, Mr. Hall put a reporter on the telephone with a tape recorder to talk with Louis P. Dennaenzo, who was described in a major editorial feature as "president of the South Deering Improvement Association," a group "which he says has 700 members" protesting residential influx of Negroes in the Thrumbull Homes development in that community.

The interview brought statements from Mr. Dennaenzo, a civil engineer, that as of March of this year approximately 150 Chicago policemen were allocated to the Thrumbull Homes development to prevent feared outbreak of violence. This the Montgomery Advertiser reported in Mr. Dennaenzo's words, was the round-the-clock patrol. Mr. Hall allocated four of his editorial columns to the report. His point, of course, was obvious, that Chicago, too, had a touchy race situation.

Mr. Hall's staff produced an article following interviews with society editors of the New York Times, Herald Tribune, and Journal American, the Chicago Tribune, Detroit Free Press, Los Angeles Times, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and Washington Post. Again, the report ran four of the Advertiser's six columns, the results showing that of those papers, the Times had published one picture of a Negro bride, the Herald Tribune four or five. None of the other papers reported they had ever printed a Negro bride's picture in the social columns. To Mr. Hall, and of course to many Southerners, this seemed an effective counterattack against charges that the Southern press handles Negro news on a segregated basis.

The Montgomery editor talked to Paul Ringler, the acting chief editorial writer of the Milwaukee Journal, and got from him a statement that "Negroes moving into previously white areas are resented by the white residents who fear that the influx will destroy their property values." Mr. Ringler admitted that he "was genuinely baffled by the situation."

Summed up the Advertiser editor wrote: "...Wherever the Negro migrates in significant numbers, he encounters rejection."

Mayor Howard Lang of Columbia, Missouri, where are located the state university and two junior colleges for women, including Stephens, admitted to the Advertiser reporter that he had never seen a Negro in a white theatre, had not seen one in white restaurants, and that "he's sure the white hotels don't allow Negroes." The Columbia, Mo. mayor preferred "not to give his opinion on integration in the city."

Mayor Orville Hubbard of Dearborn, Michigan, fourth largest city in the state, told the Alabama newspaper reporter "I am for complete segregation, one million per cent, on all levels."

We commend Mr. Hall, his reporters, and the Montgomery Advertiser in their campaign to present the racial problem in its proper perspective.

Bulloch county youth make fine record

Forty-three students of Georgia Teachers College were honored in special Honors Day ceremonies in McCroan Auditorium last week.

We attended the ceremonies and were impressed... especially with the scholastic standings of so many of these young people.

But what impressed us most, and pleased us immensely, was that of the forty-three honored, ten are from Statesboro and Bulloch county.

Those honored included: Janis Miller of Brooklet who won the home economics award, Lucy Melton of Statesboro won the Kappa Delta Pi award as the outstanding freshman, Etta Ann Atkins of Brooklet was honored for leadership and service. Charlotte Blitch of Statesboro, Mrs. Reba Clements of Collegeboro, Clarence Miller of Portal, Mrs. Kathleen Pelts of Collegeboro, Carmen Roach of Statesboro, Frank Saunders Jr. of Portal, and Sue Whaley of Statesboro, were all scholarship winners with exceedingly high scholastic averages. Clarence Miller also won the Marvin Pittman scholarship award.

Statesboro and Bulloch county should be exceedingly proud of these young people and for them we toss our hat high into the air.

We Toss Our Hat Up For Sam Neville

This week we toss our hat for Sam Neville, Bulloch county farmer who has been named third place winner in the state grazing program conducted by the State Extension Service.

Mr. Neville was honored at a special dinner at the Georgian Terrace Hotel in Atlanta last Thursday, together with the first and second place winners.

The Bulloch county farmer had already been declared the winner in the southeastern district of the state.

Farmers like Mr. Neville account for our county's high position in the state as a leader in farming practices.

We congratulate Mr. Neville and toss our hat high into the air for him and the members of his family who helped him win this high honor.

Weekend crashes accounted for 15,730 killed and 766,000 hurt during 1955.

Eighty-five per cent of the vehicles involved in accidents were passenger cars.

The Editor's Uneasy Chair

IN SOME RESPECT it was just like the old days—but in some other respect there was a difference.

With the realization that you have a flat tire the feeling is exactly as it was, long ago—disgust. Then, before you even get out you begin wondering if there is a jack in the car—that's the same over the years.

Today, you lift the trunk compartment cover to find your spare tire, properly inflated, there's the bumper jack, the lug wrench—all ready. You pull the emergency brake light. You jack up the far, flip off the hub cap, loosen the lugs pull the flat tire off, slip the spare on, replace the lugs, tighten securely, slap the hub cap back on it, take the jack down, put it back in the trunk compartment with the flat tire, and lug wrench, lower the trunk top, brush off your hands, get back in the car, start the engine, engage the automatic transmission—and you are off, with a loss of about five or ten minutes, and a little dust, and your temper in fair shape.

BUT WE REMEMBER when changing tires was a major operation. With the realization that a tire had blown out or was punctured you visualized a completely disrupted trip, day, temper, and loss of much time. You looked for a stone, log, or rock to kick up, or a wheel to keep it from rolling. You pulled out the front seat, hoping that the jack, the jack handle, the lug wrench, the pump, the tube patching, were all there. Anyone missing sent you off up the road to seek help from the first source available. If you were lucky and found all these you rolled up your sleeves, if in the summer, or took off your coat, if in winter. If the family was with you there was plenty of advice on how to go about the job of fixing the flat.

Now begins the patching process. The little can with the nutting grease you rough up the rubber around the puncture. Then the little tube of cement and the little can of patches. You pulled off the cloth backing and by now the rubber cement had set and you pressed the patch into the hole in the tube. You wait a little while for the patch to take. Now you reverse the process... back into the casing the wiggly, limp tube goes. You maneuver it until it seems well placed in the casing, you pump the little air into the tube to hold it in place while putting the little tire and tube back on the rim. You slip your tire tool between the tire and rim, you press and push, and find the casing and tube are loosely on the rim. You connect the hand pump with the tube valve and you begin pumping—up and down... up and down... one of the family thinks it would be fun to pump a little and so he tries it back to you. You think it's just a minute. You think it's tight enough, so the tire and rim goes back on the wheel. You replace the lugs and tighten them, first one then the other, in the opposite circumference of the rim, and so on until you think they are all on evenly and securely.

You crawl under the car to press the lever which reverses the jack action, and you back out and begin the delicate process of lowering the car onto the patched tube in the tire. You hold your breath when the jack falls as the car puts all its weight on the repaired tire.

How does it strike you? If you're a mother, can you truthfully say that you anticipate this time that you can now spend with your children?

Or are you like the mother who complained to the teacher, "I'm trying to get all the sewing done before school is out because when the children are home underfoot I'll never get a thing done."

This is a far cry from our mother's time. Parents looked forward to vacation for then there'd be some extra shoulders to help lift their load. Here, may be, too, the answer to the cause of rise in juvenile delinquency. Children have not only ceased to be a help, they have become a millstone tied around the parents' necks. Their minute are entertained every minute as though they were guests in their own homes. And pray, whose fault is it? Certainly not the children's fault!

SO WOULD IT not be wise now to begin mapping out jobs to be done for the summer? These must vary with the child's age. There was one mother of a seventeen-year-old boy who observed her son's first week of vacation. He frequented the pool room; he was restless and cross and disinterested. She awoke one morning and

If there were any old newspapers available you put them on the ground to protect your clothes. You crawled under the chassis to put the jack just right under the axle. You pushed yourself out, poked the long handle in the jack lever, and began the lever action which lifted the car off the ground enough to take off the tire.

Then began the tedious task of loosening the lugs. Remember how they were along the outer edge of the wheel near the rim. Off came the first, and all. Then with "time tools" you yanked, pulled, and jerked the tire off the rim, and pulled the limp rubber out of the casing. You located the nail in the casing, and by pumping a little air in the tube you soon locate the puncture.

Now begins the patching process. The little can with the nutting grease you rough up the rubber around the puncture. Then the little tube of cement and the little can of patches. You pulled off the cloth backing and by now the rubber cement had set and you pressed the patch into the hole in the tube. You wait a little while for the patch to take. Now you reverse the process... back into the casing the wiggly, limp tube goes. You maneuver it until it seems well placed in the casing, you pump the little air into the tube to hold it in place while putting the little tire and tube back on the rim. You slip your tire tool between the tire and rim, you press and push, and find the casing and tube are loosely on the rim. Meditation for This Week

By THE REV. J. W. GROOMS

A HUMMING BIRD LESSON—TEXT: "His own iniquities shall take the wicked himself, and he shall be holden with the cords of his sins. Prov. 5:22."

This week's meditation is in story form as told by Mr. C. L. Cowan, but the text is suited by myself. Mr. Cowan's story is as follows:

"One Sunday morning recently, coming downstairs to the dining room, I heard a quick whirr and then something soft striking the large window. I looked out and saw that a beautiful humming bird had somehow got into the house. With a little difficulty I caught it. I was afraid, for I could feel its little heart pulsating violently. Swiftly I ran upstairs with it, showed it to the baby downstairs again, and opened my hand! With a glad bound and a chirp it was off to the flowers, its friends, and perhaps, to its little birds."

THE HUMMING BIRD taught me that I should avoid places where, perhaps, I could not get out without help. The bird had no business in our house, and had there been a cat in the house, I think that it would have lost its life. A boy or a girl, and grown-ups, too, for that matter, gets into dangerous places when they acquire bad habits. I went into a fellow-student's room one day. He had a small electric battery. "Take hold of the poles," he said to me. I did, and he began to find and untangle the wires. I was told that he had come into that room you would have said that I was holding those poles; but I was not. I tried to let go, and they, charged with electricity, were holding me! So many a person thinks that he is in full control of his own mind, but when he tries to let go, he is held by the cords of his sins."

BAD HABITS are bad things. One feels that he can lose himself from them as easily as he can find them. He begins to think when he begins to do them, "And he shall be held by the cords of his sins."

But we are so glad that we have one to whom we can go for help. Just as the man set the little bird free so Jesus can set us free from bad habits. And if Jesus sets us free, "we shall be free indeed."

It Seems to Me...

By Max Lockwood

IN A FEW DAYS now that high school son or daughter of yours will march down the aisle for the last time in the schools of your county. This will be an occasion which will call for mixed emotions. There will be a spirit of happiness and a spirit of sadness as they and we realize the final closing of the first chapter in their lives.

Yes, the course is charted now. Decisions have been made, character has been determined, and ability has asserted itself. For the large part of these graduates their futures have been decided. These decisions were made with the guidance and the love given to them by those who have been a part in their development.

And so at this graduation I would make my remarks not to these young folks but rather to those dedicated men and women who have more than any others guided these young folks along the paths of life. Yes, to the school teachers, who they are dedicated, and never in the history of the world have men and women labored so long and so devotedly to the principles of guidance of a generation.

THESE TEACHERS HAVE loved them, they have led them, they have molded them, and they have given them the knowledge needed to live their lives. It is true of course that many have taken for themselves the advantage of every opportunity afforded while others have been content to be carried along with the tide. Nevertheless, this same opportunity has been theirs and every effort has been made to grant them the knowledge needed to build their future.

I think of those who would criticize the classroom teacher because she cannot dress as society demands and in the same breath declare themselves against a living wage for her. I think of those who look to the school for guidance and understanding while in their hearts they have never given of themselves to make their school a better place of learning. I think of those who never fail to make their opinions known when they are against the school, but when they are in their favor they are silent. I think of those who never fail to make their opinions known when they are against the school, but when they are in their favor they are silent.

AND I THINK of that great majority of people who love their schools and appreciate their teachers and yet somehow never find the time to thank the effort to speak and say, "Thank you, thank you very much."

much for what you have done. "Thank you for what you mean to this community." "Thank you for what you have meant to my child." "Thank you for the guidance which you have given over the years to my son."

"Thank you for the continued effort and for the continued faith you have had in my daughter when others would not take the time to lead and guide her."

Oh, of course you have been paid. We have given you a salary for what you have done. We do not forget you. You are a school teacher and you are not to be forced to give of yourself more than you give for your money. You are a school teacher and you are not to be forced to give of yourself more than you give for your money.

Somewhere deep down inside I know the answer to that question. I can see the answer when you reach into your pitifully small money sack and find that the amount needed to feed a hungry child. I can see it in your heart when you walk from door to door and seek out the needy young and old. I can see it in your heart when you walk from door to door and seek out the needy young and old.

A COMPLETE SOIL AND WATER CONSERVATION PROGRAM IS PRACTICAL

A complete soil and water conservation program is a practical land use and treatment, a program scientifically based on a soil conservation survey and inventory of the farm. It utilizes every acre according to its capabilities and treats every acre according to its needs, controls and makes full use of rainfall, and meets the demands of the farmer as to products and income on a permanent or continuing basis.

It is not "carried in stock" for widespread distribution to fit any and all farms. Instead, it must be made for each "farm and farmer" just as a "made to measure" suit is made for an individual. It is individualistic, it fits perfectly the farm for which it was made but will not fit any other farm.

When correctly planned, adequately applied, and religiously maintained, it will forever keep productive the farm for which it was made and the farmer prosperous.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lanier give formal dance for their daughter

By Mrs. John A. Robertson

Monday evening, May 21, Mr. and Mrs. James Lanier honored their daughter, Carlyle, on her 16th birthday with a formal dance at the Brooklet community house.

The dance hall was a scene of loveliness in white and red. The rose garden in which were white metal seats, was surrounded by white trellises entwined with red roses and red and white balloons were suspended from the ceiling.

The birthday table was overlaid with an imported linen cloth, and the four tiered birthday cake was white and beautiful.

Decorated with red rose buds, green foliage and the numerals "16" standing upright on the top tier, and flanked by candles.

From a lovely decorated refreshment table red punch was served with individual white cake squares topped with a red "16".

Compotes held red and white mints. Carlyle wore a lovely, floor-length, strapless dress of red net, and a wristlet bouquet of red and white.

Music for the dance was furnished by the band.
